

Revaia strengthens its platform with the appointment of Jean-Patrice Bellier as Partner

Paris, December 3, 2025 - Revaia, a leading independent European growth investor, announces the appointment of Jean-Patrice Bellier as Partner, to launch the firm's debut fund in energy transition.

Jean-Patrice joins Revaia after 15 years in strategy consulting, leading projects in the energy, manufacturing and sustainability teams at Bain & Company.

Throughout his career in London and Paris, he focused on energy transition topics across Europe and internationally, covering green energy, decarbonization technologies, circularity, and broader sustainability. He advised industry leaders across the energy value chain, innovators, and top-tier private equity investors on growth strategies, international expansion, and full potential transformations aligned with the shift toward low-carbon and resource-efficient technologies. He also supported investors and corporates across the investment cycle leading numerous commercial due diligences, vendor due diligences, and equity story development for private and listed companies.

At Bain, Jean-Patrice built the firm's global Carbon Capture, Utilization and Storage center of expertise and co-designed the Energy & Climate training for Paris consulting staff.

At Revaia, Jean-Patrice will contribute to launching the firm's debut fund in energy transition, assembling a team and deploying the investment strategy. He will contribute to strengthening Revaia's leadership into energy-transition and climate-related growth investment opportunities, complementing the firm's existing areas of expertise across software and sustainability-driven innovation.

Alice Albizzati and Elina Berrebi, Founding Partners at Revaia, commented: "Jean-Patrice brings a unique combination of deep sector expertise, strategic vision, and hands-on experience in climate and energy topics. His arrival reflects our ambition to expand our growth expertise to other verticals beyond software and tech and further develop Revaia as a platform dedicated to sustainable innovation. We are delighted to welcome him to the partnership."

Jean-Patrice Bellier added: "Joining Revaia is a natural extension of the work I have been doing for years in the energy transition. After advising companies and investors on their strategic choices, I felt the need to contribute more directly by helping steer capital toward the technologies and business models that will genuinely accelerate decarbonization and resource efficiency. Revaia's values, long-term vision, and European reach make it the ideal platform to do so, and I am excited to support the next generation of leaders driving meaningful change."

About Jean-Patrice Bellier

Jean-Patrice began his career at Bain & Company, where he spent 15 years between the London and Paris offices. He focused on energy transition, circularity, and sustainability, advising both global leaders and PE-backed SMEs in the energy, industrials, and advanced manufacturing sectors, as well as top-tier private equity investors. Over the past decade, he served as project lead within Bain's Energy & Natural Resources and Sustainability practices, guiding companies and investors through growth strategies, international expansion, decarbonization roadmaps, and transformations aligned with the shift toward low-carbon and resource-efficient technologies.

He also supported investors and corporates across the investment cycle leading numerous commercial due diligences, vendor due diligences, and equity story development for private and listed companies.

At Bain, he built the firm's global Carbon Capture, Utilization and Storage center of expertise and co-designed the Energy & Climate training program for Paris consulting teams.

Jean-Patrice is a graduate of École Polytechnique (MSc.), the University of Cambridge (MPhil), and INSEAD (MBA), reflecting a strong academic foundation in science, business, and public policy.
